REPORTS. The American ship Hellespont from Whampon bound to Shanghai was seen by the Resolute, (arrived here) o days ago off the South end of Formaga.

WE regret to llave to announce the loss of the iron clippen ship King Arthur. Ful particulars have not reached us, but we learn that she was lost in the Straits near Singapure. The Crew were all saved. The King Arthur made a very long passage out here 150 days, but she was very heavily laden and met with bad weather and adverse winds, As a model she was one of the most perfect specimens, we ever saw, and, while lying in Continent of Europe, India, China, America, the Rever here, light, was noticed as a beauty | Australia, &c., on the Correspondents of the inby all connoiseurs in naval architecture. She carried a Tea Freight of about 1,000. 000 lbs, which we believe was well Insured; the bulk of course at home, a small portion ad having been effected in Shanghai. The value of the Cargo may be estimated nt nearly $250,000 .- Shanghai Recorder

His Struggles and Mistakes. - A chequered cureer, full of strange viewsitudes and severe straggles, marked by infirmity of action, but by strong and resolute purpose and au andoubted patti sistu has closed suddenly and preomiturely. Too early perhaps, for his carn reputation, which of late years has obscured the tartisting memories of early scandal a too early for his peopl . who, i the war of nationalities, found in their armarel an enemest, bold, and sympathetic champion, has passed pencefully out of the sphere of his regal duties and anxieties; and he whi was lately the guest of our Royal House, the father of a future my address No. 1602 of the 24th instant; now stand in his place, successor to the throne of Denmark and its heritage of difficulties. A stron stalwart man, in theoprime of life, Frederick VII has gone down to the grave when his country least expected such an event, and could least endure his luss, and we shall not be rendering under honour to his memory when we say that there are few growned Hends in Europe whose fall would next." excite a more genuine feeling of regret amongs: their subjects. The into King was before all-a Dane He may have offended one political section, and alienated another clique. He may have sacrificed the etiquette of his Court to an idle passion; l he made amends for all his errors byt his mandy honest, and fearless resolve to maintain unimpaired the sovereignty bequeathed to him and the na tionality of Denmark. He lived to see his patriowithese also, the triumph of his cause at almost every Court in Europe, and to know that on the day of his death the rights of Denwark, her inlependence, and her honour, stood on a more secure basis than ever. It is not often, even in at the hands of his father-in-law, a King of Den mark, wh se daughter he divorsad, he yet 'succeeded to the Throne. But it seems that he had dearnt nothing by the penalties for his early indiscretion, for in 1816, two years before his accession to the Throne, he divorced his second wife. which at one time so seriously, jeopardised his 199; pularity with the best classes of his subjects. There were times when his throne seemed to stand as unstable as any continental throne that shook beneath the blast of revate and public career, to wound the sus contibilities or arouse the resentments of almost every class of his subjects. He combined the old notions of kingship with very little respect for his publes. and kept the latter alouf, while he defied, and iga nored the wishes of the people. Yet he was wise enough to yield when there were vigns that the tension was a little too severe.
